BIOCHEMISTRY DEPARTMENT

RLMC FACULTY SHINES AT UHS CONFERENCE

The Department of Biochemistry conducted an engaging and interactive session, designed to enhance students' understanding of clinical applications of biochemical concepts. In this session, students were presented with a variety of clinical case scenarios that encouraged critical thinking and problem-solving.

Under faculty supervision, students discussed and analyzed each case, identifying relevant biochemical parameters and guiding the appropriate laboratory techniques required for diagnosis and interpretation. The activity successfully integrated theoretical knowledge with practical application, helping students to strengthen their clinical reasoning skills.

The session was highly interactive, with active participation from students throughout. They expressed great enthusiasm and appreciation for this hands-on learning approach, noting that it provided valuable insights into the clinical relevance of biochemistry. Many students also recommended conducting similar sessions regularly to further enhance their practical and diagnostic understanding.

Overall, the activity was a great success and contributed significantly to the students' academic and professional development.

Prof. Sadia Qureshi from RLMC was a guest speaker at a UHS conference, where she delivered a keynote on neurodegenerative biomarkers.
